Our country is celebrating the 75th anniversary of Independence. It is time to evoke the memories of thousands of people who sacrificed their lives to uphold the honour of our motherland. It is also an occasion to take pride in the country's rich legacy and heritage, the colourful fabric of myriad cultural expressions, the remarkable progress in the different domains, and the secular and democratic nature of the society. And it is our responsibility to safeguard and maintain the glory of our beloved country. We have to imbibe the ideals and values enshrined in our Constitution and should strive to protect the rights of the downtrodden and the marginal. Though our country has gone much forward, it is shocking to note that caste is still claiming the lives of so many innocent people. The news of the death of a Dalit boy in Rajasthan who died after he was beaten up by a teacher for touching a drinking water pot in a private school, reminds us that we have to fight against many things with the same spirit that we showed during our march to freedom. I would like to conclude with the words of Dr. B.R. Ambedkar, 'So long as you do not achieve social liberty, whatever freedom is provided by the law is of no avail to you.'
